

Researchers use the information that is similar to the information on "privacyrights.org/data-breaches" to study what is going on in the the cyber world. The information that is on that website gives numbers or breaches that's happening all around the U.S and in each state. It also gives them numbers of types of organizations as well with banks as well. This would good for researchers in a way when they need this information for their company and see where to avoid any sort of breaches to happen in the future.
