Journal Entry 15

Andriy Slynchuk had described multiply actives that are illegal on the internet, but the five serious activities that could be don't on the internet are faking your identity, using other people's internet, collecting people's information especially if they are underage, illegal searches, and cyber bulling. Taking part of theses action could probably be the worst things that a person could possibly do on the internet. Faking your identity is a is a serious on because they falsely claiming to be someone else but it's also a fraud, like Slynchuk said its dangerous and can lead to minors to "decreased privacy." Using other people's internet is a big one because that could lead them to hacking into their security systems, it's also considered stealing due to the fact that they paid for it and whomever is using it without consent. Gathering information on underage people, is a huge crime, not only are they gaining personal information on a minor but it also "violates the children's online protection act". Illegal searches are at the bottom of the list of the top five but is still a serious action because people search thing that could possibly harm others. Then cyberbullying is a huge one because cyberbullying could lead others to harm themselves simply to the fact that they can't handle what's being said on the internet. All of these are serious illegal actions because they all have an effect on society in their own ways.
