Journal Entry M7

PIC2. When you've had your "fun" 1st semester and 2nd semester comes and its time to lock in

PIC8. When you get asked from your grandma/grandpa to login into their Facebook account for them

PIC10. Me taking pictures for my friend * When your friend asks you to take their pictures and you get all the angles* vs my friend taking pictures for me. * They just stand still and don't get any angles

In a way these three "memes" (except one) don't really relate to "human-centered cybersecurity" but it could relate to the "human-centered" part. Meme ten "Me taking pictures for my friend * When your friend asks you to take their pictures and you get all the angles* vs my friend taking pictures for me. * They just stand still and don't get any angles" and two "When you've had your "fun" 1st semester and 2nd semester comes and it's time to lock in" relates to human-centered because both of the memes tap into the topic off catering onto someone else in terms of getting a perfect picture and turning in your assignments in on time for the convince of someone else (teacher). Meme eight "When you get asked from your grandma/grandpa to login into their Facebook account for them" relates to "human-centered cybersecurity because I'm giving Facebook the sources (verifications by either email, phone numbers, etc.) it needs for me to login into my grandparents account when they have locked themselves out.
