In the video of “ What does a Cybersecurity Analyst do” by Nicole Enesse, I can find a broad perspective on social behaviors intrinsic that allow us to expand our frontier in this major of cybersecurity.

Starting with the communication skills a person must possess to communicate effectively with stakeholders due to no everybody can understand the technical terms associated with cybersecurity. This also includes in the education of the employees when employing training in the company. As mentioned, Cybersecurity analyst may required security clearance specially in areas of Washington DC. In the social aspect that person must be trusted it and responsible because that person will work with sensitive information that must be protected it and earn trust from the employers and co-workers. Moreover, adapting and constantly educating, reflects a social trend of keeping track of changes in the world as technology moves quickly and the need to adjust is integral to this role in the industry of cybersecurity. I can also observed, the social importance of ethics in technology as cybersecurity analyst face ethical challenges as balancing privacy in order to safeguard the security needs of a company while adhering to professional standards and legal requirements. Finally, managing the stress of a daily routine in the life of a cybersecurity analyst is crucial, as protecting a company from cyber attacks and cyber threats can overwhelm somebody. Seeking social support networks can play significant role in helping analysts cope with the demands of their job.

In conclusion, being a cybersecurity analyst allow us to understand the deeply intertwined with many social themes, from skills like communication, ethics, stress management and the variations of opportunities out there to network with many entities.
