As someone who chose cybersecurity straight out of high school, it wasn't my first choice but it was my choice because of the prior knowledge and the career development course I was taking during my senior year of high school. The career development course was a cybersecurity course that granted me the COMPTIA A+ certification and it was the first step of me realizing that cybersecurity is the field for me. But then it leads to the question "what jobs or field are you looking for" as a sophomore here, I have no idea what i want to do as a job as of right now but what caught my eye was being a system authorization. A field in cybersecurity I try to stay away from is anything regarding education and teaching. I want to be hands on and understand the true meaning of a cybersecurity specialist.
