

Shannon Harris
CYSE201S
Journal Entry 3

The information available on PrivacyRights.org website provides plenty of useful information on data breaches. Researchers could use the public available tools on the websites to find out information on the latest breaches. This information can be used to help build reports and be aware of trends in cyberattacks. The website also provides updated cybersecurity laws and privacy rights that a lot of people are not properly informed about. Researchers also use the site to help victims of data breaches become more educated on privacy data protection. Many people are misinformed and often are not properly provided with updated information on data protection rights. Researchers can use the information from the site to help inform others and spread the information for others to understand.