The video sheds light on how important it is to have protection on the web. Most of the situations were real events that hackers use in often occurrences to exploit others. I think the media puts it out there, but a lot of people are often not quite sure what may be happening due to the lack of knowledge about the different types of cyberattacks out there. I do see an increase of media sharing these different methods and events within the cybersecurity realm as more and more attacks are on the rise and hackers becoming more advanced. I do believe that there should be more exposure to the cybersecurity protection part more than just how the attacks and hackers are successful which is more of what we see and is discussed in the media.
