

Shannon Harris
CYSE 201S
Journal Entry 15

Journal Entry 15

Digital forensics investigators relate to social sciences in many ways using different theories and methods to understand data digitally. Tao referred to being able to analyze different data online. For example, mapping online social networks brings in the psychological theory to understand and being able to identify people within criminal networks. Digital footprint analysis is connected to social sciences in understanding how people interact and analyzing persons behavior patterns. Using social science theories and methods improves an investigators skills to successfully solve cybercriminal cases and help with court law.