Review what the author says and write a paragraph describing the five most serious violations and why you think those offenses are serious.

After reviewing the eleven things users do online, I found these five violations the most serious. The first violation I found that users do is share passwords, addresses, or photos of others. Posting someone else's photos/ or info online is illegal. This happens a lot, and a person gains access to someone's information and tries to sell it online for money and personal gain. Using unofficial streaming services is the next violation, which is serious because it goes against the law. Accessing these streaming services could put your information at risk as well as cause a virus on your computer. Collecting information about children is the next violation that users commit on the internet. Children are vulnerable targets because they do not have enough knowledge about internet safety. Allowing children to access the internet and social media platforms is risky because it puts their information at risk of being stolen. The next violation is using other people's internet. When you use another person's internet, it puts your information at risk because the owner of the network can gain access to your personal information. Also, people using the network device could do things that are against the law, and the person who owns the WIFI will be at fault. Lastly, extracting audio from YouTube is a violation because anything that is uploaded to YouTube is copyrighted. Anything that is extracted from YouTube goes against the law and constitutes a serious violation.
