

Journal 3

Yes, it is ethical to studied people in cyberspace when they don't know. I say this because when people know when something is going to happened, they tend to not show normal tendencies. For an example when people try to act normal in front of cameras, it usually comes off as they are trying to hard and they are obviously not comfortable recording themselves.