Journal Entry 14

Using Unofficial Streaming Services: It is against the law to watch pirated material through unofficial streaming services, as it violates copyright laws. This is a very bad rule because it hurts the entertainment business, keeps artists from making money, and puts users at risk of cyber threats like malware and data theft.

Using Torrent Services: It is against the law to access copyrighted material without permission when you download pirated movies or music from torrent sites. This is a serious crime because it not only hurts creators by stealing their work, but it also encourages the illegal sharing of material, which makes the piracy problem worse.

Theft of a name Online: Identity theft happens when you use someone else's name or give false information online. This is a very bad crime because it can be used to trick people, hurt people, or take money. It also violates people's privacy rights, which could have very bad results for victims.

Recording a VoIP Call Without Permission: Many places make it illegal to record voice talks over the internet without permission. This is a major violation because it invades people's privacy rights and can lead to criminal charges, especially if it's used for bad things like blackmail or spying on people without their permission.

Illegal Searches on the Internet: Some searches on the internet are illegal, like those that lead to child pornography or other illegal content. These searches are very bad because they can get police involved right away and have legal consequences, such as jail time, as well as bad social and personal effects on the people involved.

These kinds of violations are especially bad because they break the law and morals, hurt people and businesses, and can lead to big fines and legal trouble for those involved.
